This article describes what every organization must have to be successful and education is no exception.

Elements of a successful organization

Any organization to be successful must have these elements.
Have a product or outcome that can be achieved and verified that it has been achieved.
Have competent personnel with the skills necessary to do the job.
Have a flexible processing system which can adapt to changing conditions
Have an evaluative system can provide information about the personnel, the process and the quality of the product or outcome.