

America the Land of Criminals

By America I mean the USA as almost every person in the country breaks some law or regulation every day. Fortunately for us most of the laws are not enforced as it is almost impossible to go through the day without violating some law or regulation. The USA is probably the most regulated country in the world.

Legislators at the local, state and federal level think they must pass laws whether they are needed or not. Bureaucrats then take or make up a law and make hundreds or thousands of regulations which they think or want to use to enforce the laws and regulations. At least legislators have some accountability as voters can replace them, which they seldom do. Bureaucrats seem to be accountable to no one.

While its bad now I dread to thinks what the future holds unless the people start realizing what is happening and start demanding the government officials start making a lot of changes that will protect the public and not special interest groups.