

The entire federal government is exempt from consumer protection laws that limit unwanted robocalls that applies to businesses and individuals across the country. The Federal Communications Commission decided in a ruling issued Tuesday night.